A Man Confesses to Maye Reen Secretary
Seward's Would-Be Assassin.

Lousville, Ky. Tuesday, March 20, 1856.
A man named King, arrested a few days ago
for a theft recently committed in Ohio, and awniting on jull a requisition from the Governor of Ohio, confessed to Harrie, a recently confined Government detective, that he (King), and not Payne, was the man who attempted to assassinate Secretary Seward. This confession being repeated to Gen. Jeff. C. Davis, who demporarily commands this department, the latter teleseconds to Washington for the parties who were rewhich God had evidently designed and intended to be inferior, and use its power in behalf of a gallant nation now struggling to achieve the independence of their native land. He was in favor of Fenianian, firstly became it was right. He always sympathized with any oppressed people striving for their liberty. But he also favored the Fenian movement because he felt and acknowledged the obligations which he had been under in former years to the men who now sat before him, for their support and assistance in the political contests in which he had been engaged. His political career was about drawing to a close, but he felt that he should indeed be might have left him in aid of principles which he had always professed and the men who had so nobly sastained him. He thought it the duty of this Government to demand the immediate release of those American citizens now held in continement in British prisons on suspicion of sympathy with Fenianism.

Mr. Datt followed Mr. Wood in a speech of similar sentiments, after which addresses were made by several other persons, and the meeting adjourned.

Murder in Roxbury, Mass.

Boston, Tuesday, March 20, 1866.

Mary Ellen Kearney was shot deed last evening in the doorway of her father's house in Roxbury by John Moran. The parties had been keeping company, but Moran's character being reported bad, the father of the young woman had forbidden him the house. The alleged murderer surrendered himself to the police this morning. Another cause for shooting the young woman, is the statement that she accidentally learned the contents of a letter from a man damand Mallory in Philadelphia written to Moran, anally learned the contents of a letter from a man banned Mallory in Philadelphia, written to Moran, an-nonneing that the man they garroted had died of his injuries, and cautioning him, Moran, to keep out of the way. It is said Moran was receasily in Philadelphia.
